Key Words: Immigrants, Education, Opportunities, Low-Income Families

Topic: Higher Education and Children in Immigrant Families

- Many immigrants that arrive in the United States, will be just as successful in their education. They want to go to any college that they are interested in (Baum, Flores).

- Many immigrants who are low-income have parents who aren’t very education and haven’t been to college. It is very hard for these students to attain a college agree because of their parents inexperience (Baum, Flores).

- There are many undocumented immigrants that want to have an education and also have a job to pay for it. It is very difficult for them to do that (Baum, Flores).

- These immigrants who are low-income have more of a difficult time receiving an education and becoming academically prepared (Baum, Flores).

Assessment: Baum and Flores explain their article very well. It is very important even when in a low-income family, to receive the same opportunities of education like everyone else. According to narratives 14 and 23 in the History 12 class, theses narratives talked about how immigrants from the United States wanting the same amount of help to receive a higher education. What this article lacks is its length and such little explanation of what these immigrant families had to go through in order to have their children receive a higher education? Overall, this article is very well written.
